MARRIAGE.

On the 15th of October, at the British Consulate, Hongkong, Mr. N. J. Hammon, Esq., M.M., Consul-General, and Mrs. Hammon, the Consul-General, by the Rev. Archdeacon Morris, B.D., and Mr. Rev. Philip Moore, D.D., Hiram Parkes, Minister of the Evangelical Church, Esq., Crown Adv. to the Consul, by the Rev. Mr. George Littler, M.D., of Shanghai.

The P. & O. steamer Malacca left London for this port on the 15th inst.

The steamer Asia from Hamburg, A.C., left Singapore yesterday morning and is due here on about the 24th inst.

We are requested to state that Lady Robinson's At Home at Mountaine Lodge has been indefinitely postponed to Saturday, the 21st inst.

The German steamer Jacob Diederichsen, which left for Saigon on Sunday morning, put back yesterday, having lost three blades of her propeller.

The dedication service of the tower and spire of Holy Trinity Cathedral, Shanghai, took place on the 12th inst., when the new peal of bells was rung for the first time.

The steamer Mayo on her last voyage to Siam, will put up to port, a part of a crew of five, who had been wrecked on the Chinese Islands on the 10th inst., the other three having drowned.

Commander Barber, of the U.S.S. Monocacy, having been relieved, has been succeeded by Commander Samuel Commander Barber, from the N.C. Dixie steamer, has started for the Great Wall, which he intends visiting before returning home.

At the Magistrate yesterday several Chinese of the poorer classes were convicted of offences under the new Morphine Law, in administering the drug to coolies in various dens. Mr. H. E. Wodhouse find each $25 or in default six weeks' imprisonment with hard labour.

A correspondent of the Japan Mail writes that Mr. Greenough, formerly U.S. Consul-General in Japan, has been granted Postmaster-General in Korea, with the rank of "Ho Pan," which entitles him to wear carved jade behind his ears. It appears that there is no post-office establishment of any kind for Mr. Greenough to manage.

The Native papers record a curious device on the part of a Buddhist priest at Foochow, who found that the shekels of the devout did not roll far enough to stimulate the charitable to do more. Cutting off his left hand, the beggar priest, and the several members set up a wooden frame under his chin, was written in large letters, the priest's intention being that in other hand in three years if the charitable did not come up to the scratch within that time.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 15TH, 1893.

In this, the 15th, as side, we seem to have fallen on evil times commercially as well as politically. The condition of trade, which has so long suffered from depression, seems hardly susceptible to permanent improvement while the silver question remains unsolved and apparently unsolvable. Some little increase in demand may take place presumably owing to stocks having run down, but there is not likely to be any speculative inquiry while exchange continues so uncertain, and it is at least certain, how that importers have to pay such an enhanced price for European textile goods, hardware, and metals, that they will limit their orders to the satisfaction of the barest immediate requirements. The advance in prices of cotton goods is already beginning to be felt by the Chinese consumer, who accordingly purchases either a cheaper quality or a smaller quantity. Lancashire must even now be discovering that the silver-using countries are taking less cotton goods, while there are no compensations in the shape of larger profits to make up for the reduced demand. Signs are not wanting of a tendency towards revival in general trade, but this revival is retarded and postponed by the battle of the currency standard, and meantime stagnation is the rule. In view of this condition of trade and the poor prospect of any material improvement, it is necessary—if the looms of Lancashire and the mills and works of Birmingham and Staffordshire are to continue to find full employment—to seek some new markets or some extensions of existing ones. This is not likely to prove an easy task. There are now few sealed or undiscovered countries to be opened or exploited, and many of those which reluctantly admit the European trader are anxious to restrict as much as possible the consumption of foreign wares and products. The map of the world no longer presents a number of blanks, which may, when visited, prove El Dorados to the enterprising pioneer of commerce; the great deserts alone remain to be redeemed from solitude and waste. Almost the last countries where foreign trade still remains in a state of imperfect development are China and Indo-China. And in those countries development is obstructed by the authorities, the Chinese mandarins from whom may be described as "poor cussedness" and the French by the imposition of a prohibitive and dog-in-the-manger tariff.

In spite of all the efforts of the Chinese officials to place impediments in the way of commercial expansion foreign trade with China goes on gradually increasing. This, too, in a face of a yearly decreasing tea export. What the increase would be if the transit pass system were allowed free play and more ports were opened to trade it is hard to say, but it would unquestionably be very considerable.

Amongst other damage done by the typhoon in Looan the railway from Malacca to Macau remained some injury at Apia, Turin, and through communication was interrupted until repairs had been effected.

An agitation is on foot in Manila with reference to the frequent interruption of telegraphic communication with the outside world owing to the breaking down of the land lines connecting the cable at Manila with the capital across every typhoon.

During the voyage from Swatow to Hongkong Mr. Hunter, the second engineer of the Douglas steamer Harpoon, met with an accident to one of his hands while attending to one of the bearings in the interval of the steamer yesterday he went to the Government Civil Hospital. It is hoped that they will be no permanent injury.

The Treaty Powers, however, it may be regarded by the Chinese authorities.

A missionary correspondent of our Shanghai morning contemporary writes to make such a suggestion. The large and populous province of Shantung possesses only one treaty port, Chefoo, which is by no means the most favourably situated for the purpose of establishing communication with a district at present isolated and virtually closed to foreign trade is likely to prove welcome to the Trinity Powers, but it may be regarded by the Chinese authorities.

Yesterday at the Magistrate's office, Fisher, who was brought before Mr. H. E. Wodhouse charged on suspicion with causing the death of his wife. It appears that on the previous evening about seven o'clock, the man called at the Stanley Police station and stated that his wife had committed suicide. Sergeant Robertson found her lying on the floor, having mangled and collided with the glass door. A doctor, Dr. Asturio and D. Antonio de Ullon, doing some damage to the upper works and heads of both vessels, but sustaining little damage herself.

The report offered by the agents in Canton of the Chinese Engineering and Trading Company, the owners of the Shipping, has been referred to Canton in the recovery of the body of Capt. Crowley. A fisherman, it appears, discovered the corpse of the unfortunate man at Towan, near Teng Island, information to that effect was conveyed to Capt. Crowley by a launch which was despatched to convey the body to the river. It is said that no evidence of any kind was found, and that there is no evidence of death having resulted from anything but a pure accident.

The cable between Malacca and Spain is again interrupted.

The great earthquake which occurred in Central Japan in October, 1891, has been investigated by Prof. B. K. E. From a study of the great line of fault extending 70 miles from the Kiso river to the city of Nagoya, it appears that the whole region on the sides of the line moved downward, and was shifted horizontally northward one or two yards, causing the earthquake.

Cholera is usually traced to impure water, but a few cases are recorded in which it was caused by food, such as milk, fruit, salad, and even bread and butter. Recent experiments show that the cholera bacilli may survive as much as 12 or 13 days in some vegetables, but that they are very sensitive to heat, and are usually destroyed in one to six hours on a stove of fruit.

It has been pointed out that the unusually hot weather in England favoured the gas companies. With a mean rise of some 20°. Fahr., the gas expanded nearly four per cent., and to the companies of 1,000 cubic feet is every 25,000.

A new method for testing the comparative hardness of different materials is in use in the Royal Research Laboratory. A diamond point, with an angle of 130°, is drawn under a load of 100 gm. across a smooth or polished face of the substance to be tested, and the hardness is estimated by micrometric measurement of the width of the scratch. The following are specimen results expressed in arbitrary units, which are inversely proportional to the measured breadth of the lines:—Lead 160; tin 234; copper, 383; silver, 423; gold, 575; soft steel, 765; glass, 1,335; hard steel, 1,376.

The new substance known as parapentophenone, or saccharin, has been especially recommended as a delicious sweetening for tea by Dr. J. B. H. Baetzke, who states that he gathers from his experiments that it has no appreciable influence on the circulation, respiration, digestion, or excretive system in general. Its sweetening power is 200 times that of sugar. Saccharin dissolves in 50 parts of hot water or 800 parts of cold water, but is best used in the form of fine crystals, because the powder does not retain moisture.

Compressed air transmission of power is practical up to at least 20 miles, according to Prof. Uwin. 10,000 horse power can be transmitted 30 miles in a 30-inch main at 123 ft. per square inch, with a loss of only 15 per cent. The efficiency is 50 to 70 per cent if the air is released, and 40 to 50 per cent if it is used cold.

That the disease germs which affect animals may prove injurious to man is also in the view of a French scientist, Dr. Charvaz. The micro-organisms which penetrate the envelopes of leaves, but on entering the circulatory system may set up myriad physiological phenomena in both animals and plants.

The American consul at Lige, Belgium, states that for every horse at least two dogs are seen in harness in the streets of that city. The hatcher, the baker, the grocer, the expressman, all drive dogs. The usual draught of the dog is 600 pounds, and he steps much more quickly than the horse.
